the funny old statue of the man with one eye and staff in hand said legislation ten percent of public architectural spending requires builders to have adornment at the exterior of their construction the funny old statue of the man with one eye and staff in hand with full upper teeth the interior of the building is marked by the exterior sign at the road animal sciences there is taxidermy inside across the paved street from another sign indicating _teacher training_ at which there exists no statue the funny old statue of the man with one eye and staff in hand seems to be missing an ear on the other side of his missing eye statues sit where they are first statues collect snow people become accustomed to the statue in front of their building and it snows among the cloistered

I do not know and the rain I cannot say for the cloistered and curious were the cloistered recognized I cannot say I have recognized a cloistered individual for they would be noncloistered the old film relevant to the future outlived two thousand one: a space odyssey was in theaters in nineteen sixty nine and with intermission for its length again in theaters nineteen eighty seven with the same intermission and raisonettes two thousand one did not win an academy award

I am not certain whether stanley kubrick won an academy award for any of his films relevant to the future the film ends in two thousand and one presented in nineteen sixty nine and a good movie to watch in two thousand twenty five the two thousand one movie was followed by a two thousand ten movie in the two thousand one movie a scene of evolution inwhich a cavemen discovers a lithic tool he clobbers an animal and then an enemy with the same tool and the 'people' evolve make other tools and climb inside a tool and go into space and rely upon the tool they are within to think and have to shut down the thinking tool called hal and since the movie is a deep space movie and everyone is dead except the hero the hero decides to continue until he runs out of resources and dies of old age whether a perpetual theme of toolism exists and what about gravity where there is no gravity

and

because I have gone camping with boy scouts the portable food would be alright

where did the obelisk come from my interpretation of the obelisk discovery is the film for the scene is particularly metaphoric and interpretive as the actors as 'dancers' in a way inwhich a brand new material discovery exists as an enlightenment to the peoples in the film inwhich the cavemen touch and fear the obelisk for its alien presence as contemporary among a caveman environment and the obelisk is and in the film was left open as uncertain and upon the film's ending the obelisk may be considered a 'marker' and there is not a soul who could determine a direction from a curious statue magically appearing on their ground overnight
