education malpractice

the teacher

miseducation is a term introduced by john dewey the introduction of a knowledge by a teacher and learned by a student which by its introduction inhibits a learning of a future foundational knowledge and were a curriculum introduced in a teacher training program to a teacher in training and the teacher assumed their own classroom and taught and introduced such knowledge or were the teacher to teach an experimental lesson nor having been introduced to an idea of the lesson's value in regard to future lessons and or educative conclusivity mediocre art is worse than bad art the superduper were forgotten and the bad art

I recall a civil war exhibit at the smithsonian american history museum in washington dc inwhich a log used for target practice by one of the sides had severed the tree through the trunk and the remaining stump was on exhibit in a gallery the curator mentions on a sign the stump was severed in battle perhaps not bad art as a curiosity of civil war anthropology of soldiers is relevant to a civil war exhibit though a curatorial sign I believe is incorrect because the tree could not have been severed in battle though in target practice repeatedly and were bad representation by the curatorial signmaker nor necessarily bad art

having seen a painting of a quaint mill next to a creek in a forest with clouds and ambiance perhaps an appreciation

having seen a painting of a quaint mill next to a creek in a forest with clouds and ambiance perhaps a mention of having seen the painting before in a kitchen somewhere and the catalog of original art with a painting of a quaint mill next to a creek in a forest with clouds and ambiance perhaps a notice of the $99.99 price tag inwhich an artist paints a final strokes on a formatted assembly line reproduction of an original perhaps not necessarily bad art as I may or may not have enjoyed viewing the painting originally without question as to originality

a painting of adolph hitler as a child at the madison museum of contemporary art in madison wisconsin a forty feet by forty feet screen print by andy warhol hung from the art museum of milwaukee ceiling important for its size though a camouflage design of colors other than those an army would choose such as orange and green and pink and blue I found noticeable and memorable though perhaps significant because of a cult of andy warhol and selected because of such a cult nor necessarily because of an impressivity of the art itself mediocre art I do not recall superduper art I do not recall a work of mediocre art I have called superduper a single time to a museum director of education who reported to the museum director who mentioned the word superduper to me conversationally a single time as well as the word affinity in another conversational exchange which I mentioned in a graduate class of professor schrag's who was an advisee of john rawls at cornell as an undergraduate though it was a plum I was eating in which I mentioned an affinity for and the following week a student sitting next to me mentioned macintosh apples and how she thought of me the circumference of the earth is twenty five thousand miles around at sea level greenwich mean time is the origin of the twenty four time zones the international dateline is between alaska and russia and may or may not be related to the twenty four time zones from the north pole to the south pole antarctica the international date line separates alaska and russia as mentioned and extends through the pacific ocean to the south pole alaska is east of the international dateline and is the start of an eastward thought from the west which is the east were one to consider russia the equator is measured as circumference and bisects every longitudinal line from the north pole to the south pole antarctica half way down the earth the earth is round longitudinal lines are cartographic in nature and include the international dateline and geopolitically speaking a longitudinal lines may not be exactly north south / south north though longitudinal lines extend north to south cartographically speaking [imaginarily and in an interest of mapping and sunrises and sundowns] may also be considered as extending south to north all longitudinal lines meet at the north pole and again at the south pole antarctica as the earth is round latitudinal lines I shall say begin at the equator and are parallel to one another

[As birds drift by . . . ]

As birds drift by,
 He casts his gaze ahead,
 The prince, each encounter A cool breeze on his breast, when Silence falls about him, high In the air, but bright beneath him Lie his rich estates, and by his side
 The young, eager for their first spoils.
 But his wingbeat
 Gives them measure.
